Safe & Secure

Staring down the barrel of a gun isn't something we're eager to do, but it's what we all should do if we want to be safe!

It should be obvious to shooters, but sometimes it isn't. Before you shoot, you must inspect the bore of your firearm.

If there is any debris or a slug hidden inside, firing the gun can result in a very dangerous, sometimes fatal situation! Not to mention the damage it can do to your gun!

First of all, make sure the gun is absolutely empty, with the chamber or bolt open and any magazines removed.

Then take a look to be sure the barrel is free of obstructions. Don't become another statistic!

Women and Children First!

Invest in Our Country's Future

We in the gun rights camp face some serious odds. One of the keys to keep from losing the fight will be how successful we all are in raising up another generation that is willing and able to fight the battle.

Women and children are that key. We must introduce women to the sport and recreational sides of shooting. Then we must tell women that it is perfectly right and righteous to refuse to be a victim and to learn how to defend themselves and their families.

I've found that once a person becomes used to having a firearm, he or she feels naked without it. Having the firearm seems to reinforce the feeling of need for it. Our opponents point to this as a psychological weakness, but to me it's a strength in our favor!

We must teach our children respect for themselves and for others. We must teach our children true gun safety, not an irrational fear of guns. We must teach our children that the proper use of firearms is not only okay, but also a necessity at times, and nothing to be ashamed of in the proper context.

The media and the schools are quietly but effectively brainwashing the most precious among us. We must turn the tide if we are to keep from losing this battle for Liberty.

Notice how I didn't say "if we are to win this battle". This is a battle that will never be won. The price of Liberty is eternal vigilance.

Tales of Self-Defense

Reprinted with the permission of the NRA. Studies indicate that firearms are used over 2 million times a year for personal protection, and that the presence of a firearm, without a shot being fired, prevents crime in many instances. Shooting usually can be justified only where crime constitutes an immediate, imminent threat to life, limb, or, in some cases, property. Anyone is free to quote or reproduce these accounts. A wary deer hunter took the precaution of placing his .357 Mag. handgun within easy reach before bedding down in his truck camper one night at a farm outside Frankford, Mo. Soon afterward, he awoke to find John Dieumegarde, a 23-year-old prison escapee, trying to force his way inside. The armed hunter summarily halted the escaped felon and escorted him at gunpoint to the nearby farmhouse where his friend called 911. The capture ended a manhunt that had involved scores of police, citizens, bloodhounds and helicopters. Dieumegarde, serving a 20-year sentence for robbery, had escaped while being transported from court on other charges. (The Quincy Herald-Whig, Quincy, IL, 10/26/99)

Kodak, Tennessee convenience store owner Don Durben had closed up shop one night and was preparing to get into his van at the back of the store when he heard someone running toward him across the gravel. When the man reached Durben, he brandished a handgun and demanded that the proprietor hand over his cash box. Durben, who was also armed, feigned compliance, but after turning to face the would-be robber, he used the box to push him away. A struggle ensued in which Durben gained the upper hand, shooting his assailant who, it was later learned, had a 38-page criminal record. (The Mountain Press, Sevierville, TN, 10/8/99)

Maurice Chevalier Dozier made a fatally poor decision when he targeted Dario Adams' Chattanooga, Tenn., home for burglary. When Dozier, who had a lengthy criminal record, pried open a side window and began to climb in, Adams fired once with his 12-ga. shotgun, fatally striking Dozier in the side. "The law presumes someone willing to break into your home while you're there is willing to hurt you or kill you. And the use of deadly force is justified if and when you are in danger of serious bodily injury or death," said Hamilton County District Attorney General Bill Cox of the incident. (The Tennessean, Nashville, TN, 7/29/99)

Quotes to Note

"We cannot but pity the boy who has never fired a gun; he is no more humane, while his education has been sadly neglected."

from "The Quotable Hunter" from the Lyons Press

"Firearm freedom could be forsaken and forgotten in just one generation."

- Chariton Heston
Guns & Ammo magazine
April 2000

"Foolish liberals who are trying to read the Second Amendment out of the Constitution by claiming it's not an individual right or that it's too much of a public safety hazard don't see the danger in the big picture. They're courting disaster by encouraging others to use the same means to eliminate portions of the Constitution they don't like."

Take That to the Bank!

(this article was heavily excerpted from www.WorldNetDaily.com)

The photo above is of an anti-gun sculpture on the grounds of the United Nations. Interestingly enough, in the background is the Citibank building.

Recently, Citibank has been at the center of a gun storm. It all began in February when a Las Vegas branch of Citibank closed a three-day-old checking account opened by the Nevada Pistol Academy, a local shooting club.

To make a long story short, Citibank had told the club that "Due to Citibank not maintaining accounts for businesses that deal in weapons," the account would have to be closed.

After intense public pressure and a threatened boycott, following a series of WorldNetDaily reports exposing Citibank's practice of denying banking services to firearms business, the global financial giant has now reversed its "longstanding" policy.

Even though this seems like a victory, I would be wary when considering Citibank for my banking needs. I would make it a point to ask the manager and mention the recent controversy.

You can read the whole story online at www.WorldNetDaily.com, which - by the way - is an excellent alternative source of news that does not have a liberal slant. Unusual stuff here, too!

Where can I carry my handgun? What States will recognize my concealed carry permit?

Answering these and similar questions is the goal of www.packing.org, an excellent resource to help you navigate the maze of differing State laws and regulations.

A "User Contributed Concealed Carry Database", the site does not claim to offer true legal advice (just as GunFAX does not) but it is a valuable resource.
In addition to the submissions from registered site visitors, the site offers links to the laws of the various States so you can see for yourself.

This is a site worth seeing - often.

Guns in the Media

Proof of Anti-Gun Bias

Do you think there's media bias against guns? Of course you do...
Now it looks like we have solid proof!

Media Research Center senior researcher Geoffrey Dickens reviewed 2 years of gun policy stories on ABC,
CBS, CNN, and NBC. He found 653 morning & evening news stories concerning gun policy, and 357 of them advocated gun control, while only 36 opposed gun control. That's 10 to 1!

Evening news shows were anti-gun by 164 to 20, and the morning shows were anti-gun by 193 to 15.

ABC "led" the pack, with a record of 43 to 3 against guns, while their
"Good Morning America" show preferred handing its time to antigunners by a margin of 92 to 1. Good morning indeed...

During the 2 years studied, the topic of self-defense with a firearm came up only 12 times on the network news.
But it happens over 2 million times every year!

Most people get their news from these folks. And this is what they're getting?
We have a lot of bias and ignorance to overcome. What are you doing to help?

You can read the complete report for yourself at their Web site at www.mrc.org or contact them at Media Research Center, 325 S.
Patrick Street, Alexandria, VA 22314,
